Raping Justice

On Wednesday John Edison, Jr., was back in a St. Mary's County courtroom in a hearing scheduled to reveal the recommendations of a juvenile services office tasked with reviewing Edison's request to have his case tried in a juvenile court. Currently he is being charged as an adult for a violent rape of a 12-year-old girl whose medical records showed no signs of physical or sexual assault.

Throughout five hours of proceedings, Edison and his family were treated to the all-too-common machinations of the state: the juvenile services office hadn't completed its report, and the judge found the need to reconvene this particular hearing on a later date and scheduled the next go-round for Oct. 20. That's right, he kicked the can down the road almost another full month.

No worries, though, apparently. State and county employees can go home to their families, sleep in their own beds, and enjoy home-cooked meals. John Edison, on the other hand? Well, he can just rot in a jail cell for another month waiting for the state of Maryland to get its shit together.
